N.Y.A. Discusses Servant Problem

The National Youth Administration discusses the interview in its fifth article on household employment:

The interview and working agreement: The interview between an employer and her prospective employee should be carefully planned and a rather definite procedure followed.

When prospective workers have been located through one or all of the sources previously mentioned, an interview of the applicants follows.

Interview should be planned: The employer is the person to arrange the interview, designating the definite hour and place for the meeting. The employer shows thoughtfulness and consideration in choosing a comfortable and restful room in which to interview the applicant, the seating to be arranged so that the two may face each other without glare from a light or a window for either.

People who are accustomed to interviews vary against "snap judgments" and prejudices, remarking that it is proven there is no relation between appearance and attitude and behavior.

The interviewer strives to put her applicant at ease, and then proceeds with her statement of the particulars of the job, asks leading questions and listens patiently to the answers.

A publication entitled "A Handbook for Round-Table Discussions Among Household Employers," issued by the United States Department of Interior office of education lists in two separate columns the information which, at the termination of the interview, the two parties should have obtained. These points with others we believe essential, are listed below.

Definite information should be obtained: The employer should become acquainted with the following facts:

The preparation the employee has had for the work to be done, and where the experience was gained.

Whether or not references are available.

Age of the prospective employee.

Health record. Many housewives now demand a physical examination of the employee.

Length of service in previous positions.

Religious preferences.

Attitude toward children (if there are children in the family).

Determination of the presence of those personal traits which the housewife believes will be most valuable for her family. The traits include honesty, willingness to work, dependability, promptness, neatness, orderliness in work, loyalty and so forth. Some of these will be found in references.

Nationality.

Determine whether for any reason she must live out, i. e. dependents that require some of her time.

Her apparent interest in this type of work determined from responsiveness and enthusiasm in her answers.

In return her employer must be ready to give that information which will introduce the employee to the ways of family and will help her to decide whether she can successfully work in this particular home.

The employee should become acquainted with the following facts:

Detailed information concerning the various kinds of work she will be expected to do. We might add here, that enumerating the labor saving devices, such as the electric washer, or ironer, used in the home, will give her a better idea as to the actual work to be done.

Whether she is expected to live in or out.

Living accommodations, if she is to live in. At this point, she should be informed as to whether she will be allowed to entertain her friends in the house and if so, what space will be available.

Number in the family. Here the housewife should give ages of children if any, what members of the family are to be at home for work, and whether or not the meals are regular.

Religious practice of the family so that friction may be avoided from the outset.

Hours of work—here the employer must be specific as to the hours she demands of the employee in actual work, and those spent "on call." "Time on call is not time when the employee is not free to leave the house, but may be allowed to follow her own pursuits on the premises."

Wages should be determined by the skill, experience and the responsibility that goes with the job. If overtime work is done compensation should be made. Loyalty of service and increased skill should also be recognized and compensated.

Whether the position is temporary or permanent in nature.

Vacation. It is customary for an employee who has given one year of service to receive at the end of that year a week's vacation with pay.

Discharge. It is an act of courtesy for either party to give one week's notice, or one week's pay on the part of the employer at the termination of work.

Uniforms. Usually these are supplied by the employer and laundered by the employee.

Breakage. Employee is charged with certain percentage of breakage.

Wastefulness. The housewife should indicate her attitude in regard to this factor of economics in the household.

Medical care and accident insurance. These factors in employment are often discussed at the outset.

Conferences and written directions. The housewife may arrange to hold conferences with her helper and at this time give written directions for work to be performed. This eliminates confusion and misunderstanding.

Streams Flow Inland in One Part of Australia

Australia is a land of paradoxes, of scintillating flowers and songless birds, and one of its oddities is rivers which flow almost from the coastline into the heart of the continent, relates Quentin Pope in the Chicago Tribune.

Notable among these is the Goulburn, which winds through Victoria to the north, turning its back on the waters of Bass strait and flowing on to join the Murray, Australia's Father of Waters, which for much of its 2,000 miles is the border between Victoria and New South Wales.

The Goulburn has made possible one of the richest developments in the country. Victoria spent millions on the work of irrigating the Goulburn valley, creating thousands of acres of fertile land through a system of more than 3,000 miles of channeling.

The Eldon weir, shadowed by softly rounded hills, and the Waranga basin together hold and distribute nearly 1,000,000 acre feet of the Goulburn river that once flowed into the Murray. The Goulburn irrigates more areas than any three other rivers in the country could supply.

Early explorers reported the country south of the parallel of 34 degrees as "uninhabitable and useless for the purpose of civilized man." They could find no trace of any river falling into the sea between Cape Otway and Spencer's gulf, and thus wrote off the territory as waterless. The odd trick of the Goulburn of flowing away from the sea to join the Murray had fooled them. It was only the determination of a governor who sent off another expedition to the unknown country to exhaust all possibilities of water existing, that started this region on the way to prosperity.

Michigan 'Wolverines'

The usual explanation for the nickname "Wolverine," according to the Detroit News, is the fact that this territory in its early days abounded with the fur-bearing animal known as the wolverine or glutton. This animal, now extinct in Michigan, belonged to the weasel family. Another explanation, however, is that Conrad Ten Eyck, a tavernkeeper about the year 1800 made a specialty of wolf steaks. After his guest had eaten a beef-steak or lamb chop, he would be asked, "How did you like your wolf steak?" A young girl who had been told in this manner that she had eaten wolf steak replied, "Then I suppose I am a Wolverine." The name, first applied to those who had eaten at this inn, was later extended to all the inhabitants of Michigan.

Dr. Arthur Heinike Discusses Orchard Growth and Bearing

The subject of "Essentials for good growth and early bearing in the orchard" was discussed by Dr. Arthur J. Heinike, at the Wednesday afternoon session of the Horticultural Society.

Eastern growers have asked for this topic and Dr. Heinike, as head of the Department of Pomology at Cornell University, is in a position to cover it fully and authoritatively.

A brief resume of Dr. Heinike's will be found of interest not only to professional fruit growers, but to the layman whose "orchard" consists of but one or two trees. He said, in part:

"As is true of most agricultural enterprises, good growth and early bearing in our orchards depends upon an interplay of many factors rather than upon one or two specific features. In the first place, we must choose early bearing varieties known to be suitable for the average growing conditions of our locality. In the second place, orchard must be planted only on favorable soils which permit the roots of the trees to penetrate deeply and at the same time to function normally throughout the growing season.

Recent experimental work indicates that the roots of fruit trees cannot function normally in absorbing water and fertilizer elements from the soil unless there is a good air supply 2 to 4 feet below the surface of the ground. Poorly drained soils generally have a very poor air supply; but there are many soils in which there is no free water to be drained away which nevertheless have only 1/2, or even less than 1/2, of the oxygen required to keep the roots fully active. The air spaces in a good orchard soil contain almost as much oxygen as we find in the atmosphere above ground, viz. 20%.

A low supply of oxygen does not necessarily mean that the trees will die at once, but they adjust themselves by making less growth and producing smaller crops.

"Given the fundamental requirements of a good variety and a good soil, satisfactory results depend upon close attention to important details of planting, pruning and fertilization. Suitable cultural practices enable the trees to take advantage of the favorable growing conditions provided an abundance of sunshine, rain and warm weather. Proper soil management methods including cultivation or mulching also help the trees to withstand conditions that are less favorable, especially with respect to the soil moisture supply. The absence of definitely unfavorable natural conditions such as severe cold, severe drought, hail, or severe windstorms, are also important factors in keeping the trees growing normally. Protection against injury from mice and rabbits and the control of borers and of insects and diseases that destroy the foliage cannot be neglected if we are to have healthy trees that are not stunted into premature fruiting but which will grow bearing surfaces large enough to produce early and profitable crops."

Habits of Ant-Eaters
In tropical countries there are large mammals known as ant-eaters. To thrive in the ant-eating life it is necessary that the creature should be armed with powerful limbs for tearing open the nests, and also be immune from the bites and stings. So Nature has provided it with a long, worm-like tongue, coated with a sticky substance with which it is able to lick up large numbers of insects as they run about in the wreckage of their home. Some species of ant-eaters have no teeth, states a writer in London Tit-Bits Magazine. In their place they have long, tubular jaws, for ants are small and need no biting; the length of the jaw assists them in their work, for they are able to stick it into crevices and holes in which the ants attempt to escape.

NAZI CULTURE
At the beginning of this century the cultural prestige of Germany was very high. The greatest ambition of American students was to study in German universities. Much of this feeling remained after the World War. But now it is all gone. The decay of German learning under the Nazi regime is incredible.

The requirements for university entrance now are first, athletic ability; second, "character in relation to National Socialism," that is, orthodox Nazi views; third and last, scholarship.

There is little encouragement of scholarship, in the cultural or truly educational sense, after the student has entered. The ablest professors have emigrated or been sent to concentration camps for refusing to give up their educational ideals. The students, instead of an impartial quest for knowledge, are drilled in the peculiar Nazi ideology, including this weird view of the human race:

"There is no physical or psychic attribute by which human beings and animals can be distinguished; there is only the differentiation between Nordic human beings on the one hand, and animals in general on the other, including non-Nordic, sub-human beings, which must be regarded as a transitional state."

In plain English, young Germans are taught that only "Nordics" are human; all other branches of the supposedly human race are just animals that may some time become like the Nazis.

BIGGER OPEN DOOR
An American correspondent in Tokyo reports a trial balloon recently put out by Domei, official Japanese news agency. The three ideas presented are worth studying. Much as a fair-minded American condemns Japan's recent deeds and words, he must admit that there's been some provocative behavior in other lands.

The trial balloon hints that Japan will gladly discuss the Open Door in eastern Asia, provided the discussion includes open doors everywhere else. Thus Japan suggests:

Equality of Oriental races, including the abolition of all colonial conditions in China, and freedom of residence and travel everywhere for Orientals.

Freedom of world commerce, including liquidation of existing economic blocs, and the abolition of tariff barriers and import quotas.

Fair distribution of national resources, including free access to raw materials needed for national existence and the acquisition of materials needed for national defense.

Much of that program is already favored by leaders in other parts of the world. It is favored chiefly in theory, however, for few white people in any nation are ready yet to put equality on such a broad base. Few, too, will believe that the Japanese trial balloon is sent up sincerely.

GIRL WITH A PAINT BRUSH
Gracie Allen, charming, radio nitwit, can do other things, too. She has a collection of surrealist paintings floating around the country, and people pay to see them because the money goes to help the Chinese.

And how did Gracie come to tackle an artistic career? She is very frank about it. She might as well tell the truth. "There's no use hiding one's extraordinary talent under a bushel," she says, "or even a dishpan, although George says that's where we should hide the pictures. You see, I just decided to paint one day, and so I painted. I just painted what popped into my head."

The result, a spectator says, is what might be expected. There are works of art entitled as follows: "Man With Mike Fight Over Manicure" and "Dogs Gather on Street Corner to Watch Man-Fight" and "Behind the Before Yet Under the Vast Above the World is in Tears and Tomorrow is Tuesday" and "Eyes Adrift as Sardines Wrench at Your Heart Strings," and so on like that.

Well, they can't be any crazier than most of the surrealist stuff we've seen. And really, thinking it over, a sort of light begins to break over us. Gracie's mental operations are so surrealist, and surrealism is, as you might say, so Gracie-Allenish—why, when you come to analyze the thing philosophically, you hardly know whether Gracie invented surrealism, or a surrealist invented Gracie.

STAYS AGAIN
Those heartless dictators who design women's apparel announce that the wasp-waist is coming back. It will take a little time and coaxing to put over, they admit, but they expect to get the girls into stays and laces much sooner than anyone got the boys out of the trenches.

They may be right, too. The impulse to say "nonsense" is stifled by the obvious success the designing designers have had with "impossible hats" in the past year.

There is one ray of hope. When long skirts were ordained a few seasons ago the ladies limited them strictly to their frivolous night life. They retained the walking-length skirt, slacks and shorts for everything else. Will they now accept a return to a more restricting former mode if it gets in the way of their golf, tennis and generally active life? We doubt it, but we'll wait and see.

This is a difficult and intriguing session of Congress, with so many members running for the presidential nomination.

Airplanes, we notice, are still risky—like autos, busses, trains, streets, sidewalks, front steps, stairways and polished floors.

The Spanish and Chinese governments are growing mobile and may yet take to the stratosphere.

Sometimes we wonder if our film nobility isn't a little too filmy.

INFECTED TEETH CAUSE INFECTION

When it was found some twenty to thirty years ago that infected teeth were the cause of a great many cases of rheumatism or arthritis. It was believed by physicians that this old if not the oldest disease of man would be cured and prevented. That a great number of cases are cured and cured completely by the removal of infected teeth has been proven so often that no one would think of questioning this fact. However, it is just as true that a great many cases have not been cured despite the removal of all the patient's teeth. In many cases the rheumatism persists because much of the poison is still present in the lower bowel, in the blood, in the joints and elsewhere in the body. Also, so much damage had been done to the joints that perfect repair or recovery is impossible.

In presenting the Dr. Frank Billings Lecture at the last Annual Session of the American Medical Association in San Francisco, Dr. Walter L. Biering, Des Moines, Iowa, stated:

"It is well to recall Dr. Billings' statement in 1920. Focal infection (infection starting in one part of the body and setting up further infection in another part, such as infection in the teeth causing arthritis or rheumatism in the knee) as a cause of disease has come to stay. But, like every other principle in medicine, it has its limitations."

Why are there failures to cure rheumatism or other ailments by the removal of focal infection—teeth, tonsils, gall bladder?

"Much of the failure in the treatment is due to the fact that the surgeon or physician removes a focus (one place of infection such as the teeth) which may be the right one and then neglects any further management of his patient. If you have removed the true or original focus you have only prevented any more infection of the tissues by this focus."

This means, of course, that the original focus or place of infection may have started up a second infection in some other part of the body and this second infection is really causing the present symptoms. Thus infected teeth may be removed but before they were removed they had started an infection in the tonsils. The infected tonsils could start up further infection in the joints or in the heart. An infected sinus, before it was corrected, could have started a middle ear infection which, in turn, has started rheumatism in some joint.

Don't expect "immediate" results after having infected teeth or tonsils removed.

Frank Underhill of Saugerties died in this city. Anthony Grawoski died at the home of Gottlieb Ewel on Hooker street.

Jan. 26, 1929—Frederick J. R. Clarke, president of National Uster County Bank and Trust Company on Wall street, died in Kingston Hospital. For years he was one of the leading figures in the financial world of Kingston.

Miss Marie Newburgh of East Pierpont street injured when truck she was riding in struck a telephone pole and turned over three times as it rolled down an embankment on the state road near Stone Ridge.

So far this month 24 cases of pneumonia, several of them fatal, had been reported in Kingston.

Racine, Wis. (AP)—Racine county's new sheriff, Miles Hulet, conquered a hunger strike at the jail with the aid of a woman from the kitchen. The 26 prisoners balked at assorted cold meat sandwiches one night, and continued their strike the next morning when they were served sweet rolls. They wanted more to eat, they declared. At noon, the sheriff astutely served pork shanks and sauerkraut. The cooking orders willed the prisoners' stubbornness. They ate heartily.

'March of Dimes' Most Humane

209 Greenhill Avenue, Kingston, N. Y. January 22, 1939
Dear Editor:
Would appreciate your publishing the following letter in the Freeman. Thank you.

In my humble opinion, the national drive of the "March of Dimes" is the most humane measure ever conceived for the purpose of the cure and the alleviation of suffering for those unfortunate people stricken with the dreaded malady of infantile paralysis. The American people, by means of popular subscription are now in the process of securing necessary funds to put an end to this ever present malicious disease. This fact that too many men, women and children are incapacitated for life, thus depriving them of the usefulness of body and limb, the vital essentials of life that should never be denied to any living human.

If you could only picture yourself, body and limbs partially paralyzed, sitting in a wheel chair or being unable to get about without the aid of crutches, you could perhaps partly visualize the unjust disabilities that people with this affliction are undergoing every day in the year.

I assure you that it would not be a pretty picture that you would care to have indelible on your mind. Nevertheless there exists in our country today a multitude of persons afflicted in such a manner. The science of medicine has contrived the cure and foundations have been established and the generosity of many have contributed to this cause, but now the American people are fully aware of the vital importance of financial aid to further combat the malady.

The "March of Dimes" shows indications that the present drive for funds will be the most successful venture ever undertaken. Sponsored by stars of radio, screen and drama, the drive is more vigorous and concerted than in previous years. I believe that it is the humane duty of each and every American to contribute a dime to this worthy effort.

Kingston has always come to the front in the time of need and now the opportunity presents itself for our city and citizens to outdo ourselves and generously contribute to the "March of Dimes."

In conclusion, we will not only be proud to wear a button, but also take marked pride in the fact that our community has cooperated 100 per cent to make the drive a success. We shall and we will accomplish our ultimate goal and eliminate to extinction the deadliest enemy to mankind.

Humanely yours,

Nothing to Show That Republicans and Democrats Object to Politics Inside Federal Government
By DAVID LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1939)
Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—There is something so transparently hypocritical about present-day politics that it would seem incredible to make mention of just what the debate over the confirmation of Harry L. Hopkins as secretary of commerce really means.

The Republicans, almost to a man, voted against Mr. Hopkins, and the Democrats, with few exceptions, voted with him. The question at issue was whether Mr. Hopkins' management of relief was political. There was no problem of personal integrity. It is true, many of the Democrats, in voting to confirm Mr. Hopkins, did not wish to be recorded as approving what he did in public (mcs).

From the debate, it might be inferred, however, that the Republicans and Democrats are against politics in relief, but there is nothing to show they object to politics inside the federal government. So ingrained is the political tradition that it is doubtful whether a handful of voters could be obtained today for a bill to prohibit any member of the cabinet from being an officer or director or manager of a political party or its funds.

Thus, James A. Farley has held the office of chairman of the Democratic national committee and chairman of the New York state Democratic committee during the entire period of nearly six years that he has been postmaster general in the cabinet of the President, and there has been really no substantial objection from the leaders of either political party.

Maybe someone else wouldn't be permitted to play such a triple role, and maybe it's a tribute to the remarkable personality of Jim Farley, but the fact remains that a congress that doesn't object to an active manager of political campaigns in a President's cabinet can hardly object to the retention in public office of another man in the President's official family whose contact with politics was confined to incidental effort.

Maybe, if Mr. Hopkins had been known as the vice chairman of the Democratic national committee, or had held some conspicuous office in politics openly, he never would have aroused the ire of the members of congress. Perhaps his sin was in failing to be a part-time political manager like Jim Farley.

But the fight now is over, and the question is whether Congress is in earnest or playing a little politics of its own in the Hopkins controversy. If Congress were in earnest, there would be legislation on the way to the statute books now not only prohibiting key executives in the federal government from engaging in political campaigns, but forbidding them to have any connection with the soliciting of delegates to any national convention of either party.

The Republicans may be loath to sponsor such legislation, for they themselves have been in the habit of considering certain cabinet posts as political and their cabinet officers have made speeches during presidential and congressional campaigns. The use of a government job to urge voters to vote a certain way was certainly not invented by the Democrats.

It is, therefore, important to record these things lest the impression be broadcast that the debate over the Hopkins appointment somehow symbolized something more than the customary holler-than-thou attitude which every now and then arises in Congress, when, as a matter of fact, the opportunity to cut away the abuse and defects in our system has been plainly apparent for years.

One of the curious things that showed itself in the debate was the willingness of Congress to concede that cabinet portfolios are personal appointments, and that qualifications for management of a big government department are not to be passed upon by the Senate when asked to confirm a nomination. This is, to be sure, the traditional view and on its face there is no reason why Congress should refuse to confirm anybody who the President wants to put in his cabinet—that is, if one accepts the view that cabinet officers are political appointments. A majority of the Senate feels that this is so. Whatever, therefore, the individual members of the Senate may have felt about politics in relief, they really supported the idea of politics in government when they accepted the customary contentions that a cabinet officer is a part of the President's political entourage. And that's why there has not been any real objection in Congress to the presence of a Postmaster General who also is chairman of a national political party committee in the President's cabinet.

Politics is still the controlling influence in government, notwithstanding all the crusades of years or more for a permanent civil service and a better administrative system. In Great Britain, the political nature of the cabinet officer is accepted, but he is compelled to stand before the people in an election just as are members of Congress. The trouble in America is that the electorate has no way of forcing out of office an administration whose key executives or cabinet officers abuse public power. The issue in a congressional election is the individual Senator or Representative, and in a Presidential election, it is the President. Cabinet responsibility to the electorate, often advocated by the late President Wilson, is still a long way off in the American democracy.

To Police Commissioners
Kingston, N. Y., January 25, 1939

To the Honorable Board of Police Commissioners of the City of Kingston, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

The 47th annual report of the police department setting forth the activities of the department for the year 1938 is herewith submitted.

While it is impossible, because of lack of space, to enumerate all of the activities, several of the most important and interesting functions are emphasized.

The department carried out its varied duties of the year with the usual energetic zeal and efficiency and with the usual cooperation with other state, county and city departments.

They also applied great efforts to provide for and maintain adequate police protection for the people individually and assembled, to merchants, manufacturers, schools, churches, banks and other institutions.

The work of our department has increased from year to year. We have endeavored to keep pace with the increasing miscellaneous demands for police service, and also to maintain the efficiency of the department without additions to the force at the present time.

The record of the department during the past year testifies to the efforts put forth to keep our city peaceful and law abiding.

In accomplishing this, all the members of the department served the city loyally. Credit for the accomplishment of this year's work is due to those who conscientiously performed their duty. To all the men and to the sergeants and lieutenants, sincere thanks is extended for the part each member assumed in the accomplishment of last year's work.

Motor Equipment

Motor equipment of a police department should always be kept and maintained in the very best serviceable condition, the least possible expense being taken into consideration.

Therefore, on December 15th of last year, the police radio cars and motor cycles were appraised by your honorable board and it was determined that the condition of the police radio cars and motorcycles warranted the purchase of new ones for greater economy and efficiency.

Four new Plymouth radio cars and two new motor cycles were ordered and these new cars have now been made ready or placed into service for the year 1939.

The following mileages were recorded during the year for the department's motor equipment:

Radio Car No. 1—34,785
Radio Car No. 2—31,803
Radio Car No. 3—34,041
Radio Car No. 4—37,415

Total 150,469

Motor Cycles 12,415

Arrests

The number of arrests for all causes was 895. There were 56 women. A larger number of arrests for felonies was noted than in previous years. Crime conditions in the city in many respects were not abnormal. All members of the department did excellent service in the prevention and detection of crime.

In carrying out this principle for which we are organized, we were ably assisted by District Attorney Cleon B.

Murray, who utilized the facilities of his department in substantial aid in an endeavor to eliminate a dangerous gambling group within the city. While arrests for felony charges were somewhat higher than in previous years, the record is compared with that of other cities of nearly the same population. The following is a table of arrests for the six years past:

Police School

We have continued to operate our police school each year for the past ten years. The school conducted last year was unusually instructive and successful to a large degree. It was conducted along lines of fitting those in attendance and the promotion examinations and the average number of the police department in his daily duties.

The school will function again this year. The instructors being Lieutenant Charles Phinney and Lieutenant James V. Simpson.

Constant changes in laws and in methods of enforcement make it necessary that police departments keep abreast with the changed conditions in order to carry out their work with success. The school sharpens the minds of the department members. Approved methods of teaching are employed by experienced instructors under the guidance of a definite syllabus prepared by competent authority.

having money in the amount of over $400 returned to local business men.

Thirty-seven arrests were made for other police department.

Seventy arrests were made by private persons who turned the prisoner over to a police officer.

One hundred and ten warrants of arrest were turned over to the department for service.

Changes of Personnel

On March 24, Sergeant Frank H. Fatum, was relieved from the department and placed upon the pension roll. The vacancy in the position of sergeant was filled by the appointment of Patrolman Frederick C. Stoudt to the position of sergeant the same date. This appointment left a vacancy in the position of patrolman. Leonard Howard was chosen from an eligible list of patrolmen furnished by the local Civil Service Commission. He assumed his duties on April 1.

At the December meeting of the board, Patrolman May F. Seshloff made application for retirement because of ill health. The request was granted to take effect at the end of the year.

Retired Sergeant Frank H. Fatum died on August 19.

On December 30, Patrolman Ralph Stewart died after a few hours illness. At the present time there are two vacancies in the position of patrolman. The department keenly feels the loss of these men either by retirement or death.

All were seasoned policemen of long years of service and experience, they were dependable officials and loyal members of their department.

Radio Transmission

Our radio facilities were established three years ago on an experimental basis and licensed as such by the Federal Communications Commission. Our ultra high frequency radio (the department in a position to furnish the citizens of Kingston with speedy and more efficient police service. During three years that the police have been broadcasting to police radio cars all of the difficulties which usually effect an experimental plan were experienced. The Federal Communications Commission and various other agencies kept busy with improved means of radio transmission during this period. Better and more efficient transmitters were invented and manufactured. A great number of new broadcasting stations were being licensed for time and space on the air. It became necessary to change the rules governing the type of transmitters and particularly the type used by police departments, therefore the Commission changed their rules in effect that all police departments should be licensed as "Emergency Transmitting Station" and that such stations should be provided with crystal control transmitting units, such control would be the means of guaranteeing the maintenance of the assigned frequency of the station within the .002 per cent tolerance allowable. They also ruled that a second class radio telephone engineer should be available to each police radio transmission station.

In order to comply with the rules, your honorable body secured the services of Malcolm Charchian, a Kingston resident, as radio engineer, who took the required examination, passed and was granted a certificate.

In order to meet the further requirements of the Federal Commission in changing the police transmitter to one of crystal control type, various methods of making the change were considered. The purchase of new equipment would have meant the expenditure of about $1,500.00. The exchange value of the old equipment amounted to very little.

The transmitter in service was in excellent condition, of sturdy construction and built for long service. At your suggestion our engineer made plans and specifications for construction of this transmitter to one of crystal control at a cost estimated at about $250.00. The plans for reconstruction were submitted to the Federal Commission and accepted by them. A construction permit was granted. The change was completed December 8th, and has improved the transmission 100 per cent.

In addition to the crystal control installation an automatic amplified modulation unit and a new dynamic microphone were installed. The total installation being completed within the cost as stated. I desire to commend to you the service and accomplishment of Mr. Charchian.

An additional unit in the form of a monitor and frequency meter is in the process of assembly by Mr. Charchian at a slight additional cost. This instrument also is a requirement of the Federal Commission.

During the year 1938 emergency messages were transmitted to policemen in radio cars over our system. While the system has proven its value and worth many times over since its installation, its effectiveness was keenly appreciated and demonstrated during the violent wind storm which visited Kingston on September 21st, at which time many emergency messages were transmitted to policemen who were dispatched to danger points in the city. Policemen were also dispatched to summon off-duty policemen for emergency duty.

During the year the department discarded the old police signal system which had become obsolete and almost useless. Our lines had deteriorated to the extent that constant repairs were necessary. An inspection by experts proved that an expenditure of more than $15,000.00 would be required to make the system serviceable. The system had served its purpose and had been a valuable asset to the police department for a period of more than 25 years.

A proposal from the New York Telephone Company was received in which they agreed to replace our system with one connected with their lines upon a rental basis of approximately $1,500.00 per annum. This proposal was considered by your honorable board and accepted under the terms stated. The installation became effective March 18, 1938 and the service is excellent. We now have a police signal system composed of new lines, new telephone and call boxes, all of which is maintained by the telephone company. The saving to the city was made apparent during the great storm periods of last year at which time all wire systems were greatly damaged. Had the police department, at that time, been maintaining its own signal system the expense of repairs would have required an expenditure of considerable money.

The total use of the system last year amounted to more than 80,000 calls.

Insurance Head To Speak Here

The Characters

Peter Mallone: A potential newspaperman.
 Petronella: His young sister, and staunch supporter.
 Yesterday, Peter's chance comes, with an outbreak of rioting in Rangoon. While he roars the story, Peter runs a canteen. Then handsome Tony Lance appears again.

Chapter Eight

Petrel's Fate

TONY'S eyes met hers, surveyed the unexpected scene, then returned to her face again.

While she stood looking at him, it was as if a hand rested on her shoulder and a quiet voice said, "This is fate." The next moment she repudiated the idea. She did not believe he even recognized her. On his long-boned face was an expression of perplexed amusement. He walked across the room, the stood facing her across the table. Vaguely, he had recognized her.

This is very good. I'm proud to realize that I've met you, and I'm glad I can't remember where it was.

"You're Tony Lance. You played cricket against my brother, Peter, in the Sutter's old boys' match, two years ago. I'm Petrel Mallone."

"How do you do?" Tony Lance took her outstretched hand.

"Stumpy Petrel!" he smiled. "Of course I remember. But Petronella knew that though he remembered her face, he still could not recall their last meeting. But she was too busy to explain further. She offered him coffee. He refused.

"I'm only passing through Rangoon on my way to China," he told her. "I thought I'd see if I could be any use here. But, so far, I've done nothing to deserve extra nourishment."

"I suppose you would like to get me some milk, I've run out!" he smiled. "If the sergeant has no other job for me, I'll try. It would be much easier to arrest rioters, but I'll do my best."

He turned away. Leaving her with a nod he crossed leisurely towards the door, leading to the inner office.

He was a journalist first, realized Petronella. A young, gauche, gawk, surrounded by too many young men, was of no interest to him. He wanted to get into the thick of trouble. He was like Peter. He was in search of news. She must not trouble him with anything so trivial as milk.

Watching, she saw him speak to the police sergeant, at the desk. The sergeant spoke justly. It was the first time he had done that tonight. He realized Petronella. And my men had reported for duty.

He was a dark-skinned Anglo-Indian business like and inclined to self-importance. Was it anything Tony had said to him that had had such effect? Or did men always stand up to speak to Tony Lance?

Apparently the milk munching, sandwiches, and drinking round her also felt the interest of Tony's personality. They interrupted her observation of him to inquire.

"Who is that tall fellow, Miss Mallone?"

"He's Tony Lance, a well-known journalist. He's on the staff of the Daily News."

They turned to stare at Tony's back and half-averted face.

"One confirmed her description. 'Of course I've heard of him!'"

"Stop This Escapade!"

THE telephone bell was ringing in the inner office. The sergeant sat down again and answered it. Looking up he spoke to Tony, who nodded and turning, came to the doorway. He beckoned to her.

"That call is for you."

She went hurriedly to him. Not his brother! He wasn't hurt! Tony Lance shook his head. His eyes were amused.

"No—your father, Colonel Mallone. Rightly angry from the sound of it, Petronella glared at him eloquently that she had been expecting this. She passed him. At the desk, she took the receiver, but stood hesitating. She was tutoring herself to try to keep her temper. She must not answer hysterically. It would be easy to lose her self-control. She was suddenly aware of the fearful weariness of her body. The strain and excitement of the evening had not slackened since Peter had those shots outside the Peace tent. That was hours ago. It must be four o'clock now. It would soon be light. The canteen had no more milk and father was going to send her home in disgrace. As if she were a disobedient schoolgirl!

Hello! Father! He sounded angry. It was even she had imagined possible. He was surely incoherent with rage. She could imagine his shouting, and the tight angry strain of his forehead.

Petronella! I've just heard of your outrageous foolishness! His words came a stutter, like wires in a storm.

"I stop this escapade at once, do you understand?" The sergeant must be put to the trouble of giving you an escort. Let me speak to him. Now don't argue. Get off the line. Get off the line!"

Tony Lance was standing beside Petronella. He felt that she had a sympathy. He took the telephone from her.

Miss Mallone had finished a sudden yelp here and is going home immediately. I will see that she arrives back safely. Goodbye," he said.

"And who the devil are you?" Petronella heard her father shout, furiously.

Smiling, Tony Lance hung up on him. He took her by the arm. "He'll think differently about it tomorrow. But I feel he is right. It is time you got some rest. Don't you agree?" he asked the men, who, realizing the trouble, had crowded to the doorway. They assented.

But Petronella was angry. She felt disappointed and frustrated. What right had fatherly order her home like that? Or Tony Lance to take her? She stiffened.

"I'm staying." But his hand was firm on her arm. He smiled, and it was as if he had paid her a compliment.

"No, you're coming home, Petrel!" He gave her the reason in his persuasive deep voice.

"It is half-past four. They can carry on here perfectly easily without you. There are enough sandwiches to feed the whole force, and plenty of cold drinks. If you get knocked out, you put your irate parent in the right. Whereas, when he hears the other side of this business, and sees the headline I'm going to get for you in the Rangoon News, I think he'll change his mind and order her home like that? Or Tony Lance to take her? She stiffened.

 It takes the land whose people delegate the protection of liberty to government. This is the first big step toward losing it. Just as they relate it to their daily lives are the people the guardians of their own liberty. They must protect and defend it.

blocks away, realized that he had left his umbrella. Returning to the hotel he learned that a newly wedded couple had taken the room. As he approached their door, he heard a kiss from within, and the groom said "Whose little mouth is that?" "Yours," she cooed. "And whose little neck?" he asked, kissing again. "Yours of course, sugarplum," she replied sweetly. "And whose little hands?" he kissed them. "Yours, all yours," she murmured. "Listen here you folks," the professor demanded through the door, when you come to an umbrella it's mine.

T. C. Lodge Is Beneficiary
 New York Jan. 21 (Special).—Thomas C. Lodge of 11 Janet street, Kingston is listed as a legatee in the will of his father, the late Martin T. Lodge of New York, filed for probate today in Surrogate Court here. He is left some known as the Old Grant County property at Britton Hall, Ulster county. Mr. Lodge left the bulk of his estate to his wife, Catherine Lodge, of New York. The testator died January 1, leaving property declared "more than $10,000." His home was at 141 West 76th street, New York. The cost of England's public library service is $14,000,000.

Tomorrow, Love and parting
 TONY looked down at her face close to his shoulder. "How old are you?" "Seventeen." "What made you do that?" She described the scene at the Peace. "Peter went back," she finished. "You ran a canteen so that he should have a cup of coffee? It's a wonderful thing, family affection!" She laughed with him. But she explained. "A girl feels she has a great many brothers in Rangoon." He looked at her, curiously. "That's your version of the relationship?" "No, they really are friends. You don't fall in love round every corner, as the older people here seem to think, when they put us off." "Some of them must at least imagine themselves in love with you." "Any girl gets spoiled in Rangoon." Ahead of them a volley of firing made her jump and cling instinctively to his arm. He turned forward. "Turn right, driver! We must avoid the fireworks!" he joked. But Petronella was shuddering. However, he tried to prevent it, his teeth clattered together. He heard them. "I can't stop them, she apologized. He was so casual. There was no danger. It was terrible to be so uncontrolled. If she were really to let go, she would sob and sob. She could just manage to spare him that. But she kept thinking of those horrible dabs, stained with blood, lying on the floor of the police station, of the incidents of the patrols. And she thought of one another, when they forgot her, and she thought she was not listening of the terrified women and little brown children, who were even at this moment dying of gash wounds or convulsing waiting for death in their family shuttered houses. "You'll think I'm a coward." "Natural physical repulsion! You're one of the bravest girls I've ever met," he told her gently. "Oh no, I'm not," she denied it. "Nevertheless, if I had the right of this show to do that is what I'd probably say in headlines for the British breakfast table. They'd like it. That kind of stuff goes over. Probably the fellow, who is covering this for my paper, will agree with me and do the same." "I hope not," Petronella was sure Peter would do nothing of the kind. "Any idea who he is?" They gave some young fellow the opening. He was coming out on an ordinary job. The news gets cabled from Calcutta. It turns out the same as a first-hand story. I might give him the dope about you tonight. They seemed to think he might make a mess of things. "No, you mustn't! Any way how should I know who he is?" Petronella denied, deftly. Doubt, as well as modesty, checked her confession of the truth. Peter had a paper. He would make a mess of it. Perhaps his articles would be refused. If he failed, the fewer people who knew about it, the better. She changed the subject hastily. "You're going to China? What is happening in China?" He grinned. "A good deal!" "I met a very nice woman called Miss Horton, Clara Horton, who was going out to help the refugees." "I know her. She's a very fine person. I'll tell her I saw you." "When do you go?" "Tomorrow morning. I'm afraid Peter. If I could miss that mail steamer I would Burma is a much more attractive place than I imagined." He was looking at her face. Go Wai Wai and Escape Jitters

Doctor Finds Race in Brazil
With No Worries, Nerves
Or Divorces.

NEW YORK.—A place where there is no worry, perhaps the last of its kind on earth, today gave civilization a startling medical message. The place: The jungle home of the Wai Wai Indians in northern Brazil. The message: These Indians have no heart disease, no high blood pressure, no cerebral hemorrhage. The messenger: Dr. William H. H. Holden, chief surgeon of the American Museum of Natural History, who early this year made the first medical study of this possibly last of completely primitive peoples.

Their immunity is not due to a different physical makeup. In a test which violated a sacred taboo, Dr. Holden discovered that they possess the same capacity for high blood pressure as other humans.

Some Age People. The Wai Wai, he says, have a few steel knives, obtained from Indians nearer civilization. Otherwise they are still entirely a Stone Age people. Their home is the Sierra Akari mountains. He described four months' travel to reach them in Natural History, the museum's publication.

"They live," he said, "in one of the densest jungles on earth, undisturbed by man. It is a country of peace and quiet, a literal lost world, a tropical fairyland."

When Dr. Holden and a single white companion, William G. Hassler, photographer, reached the Wai Wai, both medical tests and photography were welcomed. The villages were about a day's travel apart. This distance the Indians call a "short walk." Time has no meaning to them.

Strong on the Dogs. They live in large, communal houses, with conical roofs. Each holds 25 to 30 persons and 40 to 50 dogs. These "fairyland" dogs are reasonably quiet.

Dr. Holden took the blood pressures of the older people. Their ages he said, were uncertain, because they reckon years from one rainy season to the next, but they live to a ripe old age.

Analyzing the reasons, Dr. Holden declared "The Wai Wai never have to worry how they will pay their grocer's bill. There are no telephones to drive them to distraction. A husband never worries about how he can buy his wife a new hat or dress. Their personal adornments are procured from the brilliantly plumaged birds that fly overhead; and as for clothes—they wear none."

There is no stock market to send one's blood pressure skyrocketing. These fortunate people are not forever dodging automobiles or watching red lights in their hurry to keep this appointment or that. There are no such things as being late for work or punching the time clock.

Discovers Japanese Are Fooled on Soldier Ashes. NEW YORK—More than 100,000 homes in Japan now harbor shrines to unknown soldiers which their owners mistakenly believe to contain the ashes of the son of the family, according to W. B. Courtney, associate editor of Collier's, who recently returned from covering the war in Asia.

"In humble homes all over Japan are enshrined small white boxes presumably containing the ashes of a soldier son killed in action in China," Courtney says. "But the fact is, although Japanese officials will deny it, that these boxes are likely to contain the ashes of a Chinese soldier, a Mongolian pony or even a Missouri mule; or perhaps just a spade of dirt."

"It may be that when Japanese soldiers die in hospitals their ashes actually are returned to their families. But when they are killed at the front their bodies, together with the bodies of Chinese and, under stress of rapid campaigning, even dead draft animals, are burned together in a great pyre. Then a sufficient quantity of the blended remains are shoveled into the little white boxes for shipment to Japan."

Azerbaijan Largely Moslem. Azerbaijan is a country, largely Moslem, consisting of most of the former Russian provinces of Baku and Yelavetpol. It has neighbors which do not agree to its territorial claims, but its boundaries are the Caspian sea on the east, Daghestan, Northern Caucasus and Georgia on the north, Georgia and Armenia on the west and Persia on the south. The capital of Azerbaijan is Baku, a city of 452,000, the center of the great oil district of the Caucasus. In 1917 Azerbaijan united with Armenia, Georgia and Transcaucasia in a federal republic. Disagreements arose and the federation broke up, Azerbaijan declaring itself independent in 1918.

Jeweler's Rouge. Jeweler's rouge is a mineral substance. In its preparation crystals of sulphate of iron, commonly known as copperas, are heated in iron pots, by which the sulphuric acid is expelled and the oxide of iron remains. These portions least calcined, when ground, are used for polishing gold and silver. The darker and more calcined portions are known as crocus, and are used in polishing glass, metal or gems. Jeweler's rouge is a fine, gently calcined variety.

Monster Spiders Feast On Birds in Australia

MELBOURNE, VIC. — Spiders that eat birds is the latest discovery in the land already famous for freak animals, birds and insects.

The discovery was made by John Clark, museum entomologist, who found the legs of a newly killed turkey half way down the hole of one of the monster spiders.

The spiders have been designated as Mygalas and the largest specimen found was about 9 inches in leg span with a body as large as a boniam's egg.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—During this new year hundreds of movie players will get their names, maybe their pictures, in the papers. Quite a few hundreds more would like to know how to get their names and their pictures in the papers. For the benefit of the latter, herewith are our Helpful Hints for '39:

1—Get yourself a feud.
There is nothing quite like a good feud to help along a career. Where would J. MacDonald and N. Eddy be, I ask you, if they didn't have a feud? Where would C. McCarthy and W. C. Fields be if they didn't loathe each other?

2—Get yourself a romance.
Aw, don't be silly. You don't have to MARRY the guy (gal). All you have to do is be seen with him (her). Go steady—then when that "angle" wears thin, ditch him (her) and get yourself a new grand passion. If you mix 'em up, all the better.

3—Get yourself a husband (wife).
This is recommended only as a last resort. When you take the fatal (at least temporarily fatal) plunge, be sure to keep it quiet—don't notify your publicity guide so the photos at Yuma can be waiting. Better still, slip away and don't tell a soul definitely; just hint at it, and deny everything.

4—Get yourself a divorce.
This is always sure-fire. Better, of course, if you can ditch the spouse immediately on return from Yuma, but good any time. Gets more attention if, for months before you file the papers, you can both "deny rift."

5—Get yourself a wardrobe.
Be best-dressed woman (man) in Hollywood. (Don't mind if, simultaneously, there are two dozen other claimants to title.)

6—Sue and get sued.
You are referred to Miss C. Bennett for details.
7—Give (and go to) parties.
Everybody loves a party. But be wary lest people love your parties more than they love you.
8—Have a baby.
But ponder this step long before taking it. There is something so irrevocable about a baby.
9—Get yourself a "past."
Careful, here, though. Remember there's a production code—and apply it to your private life for safety.
10—Be a superlative.
I mean be the grandest (swellest, snarkiest) guy in town—or the meanest (naughtiest, spitefulest, most hard-hearted) dame. No half-way measures. No mediocrities, no normalcy.

Between the Dividing Lines
Club plates are ideal to use when serving a vegetable dinner; but if you haven't club plates, try this simple "home invention." Arrange narrow strips of buttered toast on ordinary dinner-plates, to serve as dividers between the various vegetables. Illustrated on the plate are buttered peas, Harvard beets, buttered asparagus and glazed carrots, with a corn stuffed pepper in the center. I must give you the recipe for the peppers, although I'm sure you're familiar with the method of preparing the other vegetables. Use canned vegetables at this season of the year, if you wish; but season them so well that they will be as tasty as the fresh.

CORN STUFFED PEPPERS
1 tablespoon chopped onion, 1 tablespoon chopped green pepper, 4 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 1/4 teaspoons salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper, 1 cup milk, 1 1/2 cups canned corn, 1 egg slightly beaten, 6 green peppers, 2/3 cup dry bread crumbs and 1/4 teaspoon paprika.

BACON AND EGGS IN A NEW PATTERN

—this time bacon serving the purpose to the delight of the eater. If you wish to use bacon for the dividers, do not fry it too crisp—or better yet, broil it. When cooking it in the frying pan, turn constantly to prevent curling. The eggs were baked in muffin tins. Simply grease the tin, drop the egg in, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and bake in a moderate oven until the yolk is set. If you wish, ring the muffin tin with a slice of bacon before dropping the egg in—and for real flavor, serve with a mustard sauce!
As a starter for this breakfast, serve fresh grapefruit or orange juice. And make plenty of coffee! Check your coffee rule again, particularly if the coffee hasn't been too tasty of late. Do you wash the pot thoroughly every day? Do you measure the coffee accurately? Is the water boiling hot? Do you check the time for percolated coffee? All are important if you would make a cup that will start the day right.
Even though you serve bacon and eggs, don't pass up the cereals. Some members of the family will eat both—and some will feel more in the mood for cereals than for eggs. Since you are baking the eggs, this would be a good morning to serve those crisp shredded biscuits. Toast them in the oven while the eggs are baking, of course. It doesn't matter whether you serve the round whole wheat biscuits, or the thinner crinkled kind; the oblong shredded loaf-like type, or those tiny shredded cubes. They've all got a place on the breakfast table and will taste especially good if toasted before serving. Have you tried serving them with a hot whole-fruit nectar poured over them? Well, there's a hot cereal suggestion that it's hard to beat.

THE WORK OF THE EXPERTS OF OUR COLLEGES OF AGRICULTURE, OUR FARM BUREAUS, ETC., IS OF A VERY HIGH ORDER. I AM CONVINCED THAT OUR OWN HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY, THE OLDEST, I BELIEVE, IN THE UNITED STATES, HAS BEEN, IN TODAY AND WILL BE A POWERFUL INSTRUMENT IN THE

President Stevenson Addresses Growers Wednesday Afternoon

An address of welcome by Mayor C. J. Helmsman, his seventh annual appearance before the fruit growers, by the way, the annual address by President J. Ross Stevenson and addresses by Dr. A. J. Hennicke of Cornell University and Dr. R. A. Van Meter of Massachusetts State College, with a report from Secretary-Treasurer Roy P. McPherson made up the interesting program at the Wednesday afternoon session of the State Horticultural Society, at the Alamo.

Mayor Helmsman said, "Of course I am glad to have you visit Kingston again," as he gave the fruit growers a cordial welcome to the city and assured them of his desire to do all in his power to make their present meeting a success and add to the enjoyment of their stay here. He said that it was apparent that the meetings of the Horticultural Society were getting "bigger and better each year since their first gathering in Kingston in 1932." He added that if they kept on growing, an addition to the Alamo would be in order and he said that he would make such a suggestion to the Governor on a visit he planned to Albany January 31.

President Stevenson, in his annual address to the society, stressed the many things that fruit growers of northeastern New York have to be thankful for and instead of discussing upon many matters that might present the darker side of the picture in a day when "the only unchanging thing about affairs is then constant change" he proceeded to enumerate some of them "many blessings" as he saw them.

First, said Mr. Stevenson, the number of bearing apple trees in our area and in the country as a whole is greatly lessened. There are only about half as many as 25 years ago while the number of young trees is only a bit more than a quarter of what we had in 1910.

We definitely are not in the class of the citrus growers who face almost insuperable problems of huge overproduction, with vast areas of young trees not yet producing.

We have not laid upon us the huge burden of debt that burdens the Pacific coast apple industry. We do have debts, but nowhere near the amount per acre they operate under.

Nor are we shipping our thousands of crates away from our markets, especially you folks in the lower valley. We are at our markets.

I believe trade agreements with other countries will work out beneficially to reduce our surplus in certain years.

In the northeast, here, while subject to occasional disastrous weather rampages we are, over a long period of years, singularly free of drought, high wind and excessive frost. There is no better area in our United States in which to grow fruit than right here in New York state.

Most of our fruit is consumed in the markets nearest us and does not need to be shipped long distances, nor to other countries. Nowhere else can better McIntoshes be grown; we believe none as good. Nowhere else is higher flavored fruit grown and we are taking the lead in improving our varieties.

The work of the experts of our colleges of agriculture, our Farm Bureaus, etc., is of a very high order. I am convinced that our own Horticultural Society, the oldest, I believe, in the United States, has been, in today and will be a powerful instrument in the move to refuse licenses to street fruit peddlers in New York city. The resolution recited that the peddlers furnished a service to the public not filled by any other agency and asked the mayor and city administration of New York to continue to license a sufficient number of reputable peddlers to supply the demands of their trade.

Dr. Van Meter Speaks
The concluding speaker of the afternoon was Dr. R. A. Van Meter of Massachusetts State College, who discussed at length "This Variety Problem." Dr. Van Meter discussed the question of varieties of short, white apple and growers had asked for his return that he might give a little fuller presentation of the problem as he saw it.

Dr. Van Meter's address was a comprehensive presentation of a question—what variety of apple to plant—that is one of the oldest problems in fruit growing. He brought to his hearers some principles regarding variety selection and the experience of New England growers with some of the varieties of greatest interest. He noted that "Conditions in New England are much like those in the Hudson Valley," although "it is probable that varieties that normally belong in the southern apple belt may be grown in the lower Hudson Valley better than in most of New England."

Several years ago New England cut the variety list to what was called "The New England Seven," but it was stated that today few growers would plant as many as seven varieties if they had to start all over again.

Fruit growers were found watching the market, with an overwhelming demand seen for McIntosh.

A sound approach to the question was said to be the selection of one best variety for each season. It was pointed out that the grower with a retail trade, or a roadside stand, needed a much longer list of varieties than the grower who wholesales his fruit. As to overplanting McIntosh and limiting that apple the question was seen to be that of how many a grower can handle. A few larger growers are said to have so many McIntosh apples that they start to harvest them too early to get a full development of quality. About 60 to 70 per cent of the orchard in McIntosh, with some saying 50 per cent, was given as about right.

For early varieties to precede McIntosh, Red Gravenstein and Early McIntosh, with a few Wealthies were favored. As proper pollinizers for McIntosh, Richland and Cortland are in great favor. Rhode Island Greening and Baldwin, Rhode Island Greening and Gravenstein are not suitable for this purpose. Spy and Rome bloom late and are not dependable pollinizers for McIntosh.

President's Parties Lead in Benefits

Although large private parties are on the wane, benefit entertainments are filling the post-holiday time and "in aid of" parties are interesting society.

The first of these will be the President's parties held throughout the county Friday and Saturday evenings of this week. Although the birthday of President Roosevelt is January 30, Ulster county will celebrate it on January 27 and 28. The proceeds will be used toward the nationwide fight against infantile paralysis.

Friday night the dances will be at the Clinton Ford Pavilion, Rosendale; Irvington Inn, Woodstock, and Huling's Barn, Kingston. On Saturday the party will be at Shanley's in Napanoch.

The principal birthday party will be at Huling's Barn where a floor show from New York city and several other features have been planned. In charge of this dance are Raymond Garrahan, Allen Baker, William J. Dwyer, N. James Fowler and Mrs. Grace DuBois.

Arranging for the dance at Woodstock at the Irvington Inn are Mrs. Charles Gradwell, Mrs. Nancy Schoonmaker, Louis A. Lewis and Eugene B. Gormley, and in charge of the party at the Clinton Ford Pavilion are Joseph Campbell, Robert Herzog, Walter Donnarumma and Henry Mollenhauer. At each of the parties there will be a specially planned entertainment for the guests.

In charge of the party at Napanoch are Mrs. John Shanley, Mrs. Sheldahl, William Joyce, Thelma McDowell and Theodor Plunkett. This party on Saturday, and the one at Huling's Barn on Friday will be the two big parties of the four.

Coming back to local benefits will be the Kingston Hospital Auxiliary dance at the Governor Clinton Hotel February 4 for the benefit of the hospital. From society and hints the party has been dropped concerning the party, which will probably be the leading social event of the mid-winter season and one of the best affairs sponsored by the auxiliary. Tickets are still available and may be obtained from any member of the hospital auxiliary or from the committee in charge. Mrs. Frederick Snyder, chairman; Mrs. Earl E. Brinley, Mrs. R. Everett and Mrs. M. Frederic Chidsey.

Man About Manhattan

NEW YORK—Several years ago somebody wrote a book about South Street. It was a very dull book and not at all what it should have been, for few have had the dramatic appeal of this old center of Yankee trading in a day when white-bosomed square riggers dotted the waterfront.

But for all its glamorous bygone and maritime legends, I think it must take second place to West Street today. Few streets anywhere have the meat that West Street has.

The scene of trading operations has shifted from East River to the Hudson. Here the big liners report and depart. Here are outlets for two eastern rail centers, the Erie and the Lackawanna. And here comes the produce from Jersey and New England.

Four-fifths of New York's green vegetables, apples, tomatoes, pears, cranberries, citrus fruits, potatoes, poultry, grapes—indeed everything that grows which New York uses in its daily cuisine is dumped in here in carload lots. These cars arrive after dark. When traffic is at low tide, and for several hours before and after midnight in the vicinity of Chambers street, which empties into West, the side walks are 20 feet high with tomorrow's green salads, fruits and vegetables.

HAVING witnessed these operations on frequent occasions, it never fails to astound me to find the street comparatively clear in the morning, with only a few crates of cranberries here, a few bags of potatoes there. They have been whisked by truck to thousands of confederate retail stores and shops throughout the city. And as completely as they have disappeared from the street, so in a few hours will they disappear from the shops—into the throats of New York's hungry seven millions.

But West street, widest of Manhattan's thoroughfares and a scene of humming activity day and night, is not given entirely to produce. It has its shipping too. All the major liners creep past. Here all the great modern mechanized docks are located.

THE great river traffic of the Hudson piles to and fro 24 hours a day. On her piers the talk is of "anchors," "winds," "tides," "landings," "slips." There are seamen cafes which keep open all night just to accommodate the crews of French and British liners. There are great tea and coffee houses here, warehouses and central offices of Eastern princes who deal in spiced merchandise from the Orient. And there are good-natured but iron-fisted Irish cops who keep an eye on the longshoremen, and the motorists, and street idlers.

LOVELY FOR YOUR GAY TIMES!

MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN 9907

Here's an easily-made bolero frock that will be as welcome as the first Spring flowers! It's exactly what you need for those hectic days when you have a six o'clock party and no time to change for it. (Just add or remove the bolero to secure an entirely different-looking effect!) The soft shirrings of the vestee section are pretty on all four corners to Forty-two. The up-curves of the sleeves and neckline are most flattering. And as you'll guess, the flared skirt has the knack of making the waist and hips seem smaller the form more supple! Remember—besides the short sleeves, you have choice of long or three-quarter sleeves (not pictured).

Pattern 9907 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 35 inch fabric and 1 1/4 yards contrast.

Your Daily Life Need Never Be Dull

Philosophy Teaches Art of Living

"Is this all there is to life—just one dull task after another?" How many times have you asked yourself this question?

The great philosophers answer. They have discovered that behind the petty round of daily duties lies the secret of a fuller, richer life.

"Think not so much of what you lack as of what you already have," said Marcus Aurelius, the great Roman philosopher—and that gives you the key.

What pleasure you can extract from everyday experiences, how you can turn a humdrum life into a glowing, delightful one is told by Lin Yutang, a witty Chinese of our own day. There is an "art," he says, in daily living—and you will find it is right.

Other philosophers too have a message for you. Ralph Waldo Emerson, the beloved American philosopher, showed that even great can be an enriching experience.

No matter what your life may be, the truths of philosophy are an ever-present guide and comfort. Our 32-page booklet gives the essence of the wisdom of Plato, Aristotle, Epicurus, other great thinkers—ancient and modern. Read and follow their inspiring advice.

A Brand New Road To Mandalay May Help China Keep On Fighting

By The AP Feature Service

China's defenders have turned to a new "road to Mandalay" and to old caravan routes to get war supplies that used to come through the big eastern and southern ports—over which the rising sun flag now flies. The map shows the most important of these routes. The one running southward from Chungking, provisional capital, is 2,100 miles long, down through the mountains to provide access to French Indo-China and British Burma. U.S. Ambassador Johnson traveled the road on his recent trip home and described it as a magnificent engineering feat. Two other roads lead to Russia. By using these outlets that prolong resistance, Tokyo says "proper steps" will be taken.

Agricultural economists predicted early in the year that farm families would have more cash to spend in 1939 than they did in 1938.

Skeffington Gives Pacific Northwest Highest Ranking

The Pacific northwest is, and for some years at least, will continue to be the biggest factor in the national apple industry. L. B. Skeffington, agricultural editor of The Gannett newspapers, told the New York State Horticultural Society last night in their meeting at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

"But," he continued, "I believe eastern growers hold the key to their own situation. What the northwest does here in the east will depend more than anything else upon how well the eastern growers do the job in supplying eastern markets."

"In the state of Washington I found orchards loaded with debt averaging $700 or more per acre, but the west is not going broke. Even if some of the present owners are forced out, the orchards still will be there producing apples. When I was in the northwest in December it was estimated the Yakima and Wenatchee districts would ship 27,000 carloads during the present season."

"Many of those apples will come right down the Hudson valley to New York. The cost of shipping a box of Washington apples to New York is about 75 cents. If the nearby eastern fruit regions cannot overcome that shipping differential it would seem there must be something wrong.

"Cost of producing apples in the northwest is much higher than in New York State, although the yield in the west is at least twice as high as in New York. Most interesting in view of current discussion here, is the fact that Washington bars the movement of cull apples except to byproducts factories. No apples may be moved unless they are of one of three grades and retail stores may not offer apples for sale unless the grade is marked plainly. In other words, only fresh fruit of known quality is permitted to be sold as such and the balance is kept off the fresh fruit market by law."

Skeffington said 10,000 acres of apples have been pulled out in the last few years but volume has remained about same because of higher yield. Over a period of years he expects there will be a decline in apple production in Washington.

Preceding Mr. Skeffington's talk, which was based on an extended trip through the northwest, there was an interesting showing of motion pictures. The film, "Doc Apple's Family Comes to Town," was shown through courtesy of Pacific Northwest Fruits, Inc.

The theme was a fruit store conversation and the film, which depicted the apple industry in the state of Washington from the tree to the ultimate consumer, featured many fine scenic bits.

One-Woman Crusade Saves Sled Riders

Children Taught Keep Off Streets With Sleds.

SYRACUSE.—A one-woman crusade to reduce the toll of young lives taken by automobiles every winter as children play in streets with their sleds may become effective over the nation in cities where snow falls.

This is the opinion of accident prevention bureau experts here, who first became acquainted with the move when they saw in local papers this ad:

"I will give free every day two hours of my time and go to the park with children under 12 who want to sled, if they will not play in the streets with sleds." Mrs. Sankey, phone 5-8235.

Investigating, bureau officials found the advertiser to be Mrs. Leslie E. Sankey, a former nurse and mother of an 8-year-old son and a 12-year-old daughter.

"I saw a young boy coast down a hill into the path of an automobile," she explained. "It was awful, and I decided to see what I could do to prevent such accidents. So I formed a sled club."

Mrs. Sankey's method is simple. She agrees to give two hours of her time each day to take children to a park for sledding. In return, the children sign a simple pledge, reading:

"The undersigned promises not to play in streets with sleds." Safety experts were enthusiastic and asked what they could do to help. Mrs. Sankey thought that perhaps the pledge would be more effective if a penalty was imposed for violation.

As a result, every club member must agree to forfeit his sled to the police if he or she should "forget" and use it in a street. So far, no sleds have been impounded.

"My! I just filled that plate with PREMIUM CRACKERS"

CHECK UP ON THE 3 "F's" IF YOU WANT THE VERY FINEST CRACKER

FRESHNESS—When you hear a cracker "snap" as you break it, you can tell it's going to be crunchy . . . deliciously fresh. Premium Crackers always pass this test because they reach you fresher. They're rushed straight from the nearby National Biscuit Company ovens to your grocer in triple-wrapped, NBC sealed packages.

FLAKINESS—One look at the inside of a Premium Cracker tells you how light and flaky it is. Extra shortening goes into Premiums, and they're made from finer ingredients . . . baked to golden perfection!

FLAVOR—One bite, and you know why Premiums are going to be a family favorite. They have a tang that can't be copied. A way of making foods served with them more exciting. Order a package of Premiums tomorrow. See how many ways you can use this finer cracker. How much better they are.

SUGGESTION OF THE WEEK!
CHEESE SNACK—Mix 1 cup cottage cheese with 2 tablespoons thick cream and 1 teaspoon minced onion. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve with a generous pile of crisp Premium Crackers.

ALMOST TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE
That's what folks say about delicious PREMIUMS made from rich, tree-ripened fruit and golden brown cake.

Well-Known Men Attend Conclave

Another of the "regulars" who was on deck at the opening of the Horticultural meeting Wednesday was E. R. Eastman of Ithaca, who marks his seventh year at Kingston. Mr. Eastman was particularly interested in the work of the commercial pack exhibit at the armory. Quite a "farmer" he has served for seven years in the fruit department at the state fair and for five years has been secretary of the State Agricultural Society. In addition to being a member of the State Fair Advisory Board Mr. Eastman is also a director of the State Industrial Exhibit Authority.

Halloran H. Brown, former president of the Horticultural Society and a prominent fruit grower of Monsey, arrived at the Governor Clinton yesterday. He was looking forward to meeting his old friends, Percy Morse of New York city and Philip Elting of Kingston in annual reunion at the Horticultural Society banquet tonight at the Governor Clinton.

As usual during the week of the Horticultural convention, the Governor Clinton is filled up. Applications for rooms were being refused last night for lack of further accommodations. Tonight is the date for the annual dinner at the hotel and Manager Gross said that indications were that attendance would exceed that of last year, when 321 guests were served.

The cafeteria at the Armory being run by the ladies of the Port Ewen Methodist church this year, did a good business yesterday, some 400 or more persons being served, with a large share of them getting their dinner there.

Occupy Barcelona

proclaimed under Generalissimo Franco's rule.

France's high command had mapped out a plan for the methodical occupation of the city after driving out its armed defenders and reducing its civilian population to submission with bombs and shells.

Ministries of the Republican government had fled to northern Girona province, near the French border, where they were spread through several towns.

The government's supporters, however, insisted the war would continue both there and in the central zone, where the government still holds Madrid and Valencia.

Truckloads of provisions rumbled up behind the Barcelona army of occupation to bring relief to the population after months of privation inflicted by the insurgent air and sea blockade of the capital.

In the last turbulent days, especially since insurgent troops reached the outskirts on January 21, the city's supply lines were reported to have failed completely, leaving a half starved population.

A great part of the city's inhabitants appeared to have remained stoically to await the arrival of the conquerors.

However, well to the northeast insurgents of refugees fleeing the insurgent conquest swarmed toward the French frontier along the road hugging the Mediterranean coast, the last avenue open to traffic. Even that route was under the bombs of the insurgent airforce.

In the fastnesses of the mountainous northeastern corner of Spain, just across the frontier from sympathetic France, government premier Juan Negrin and his ministers were reported intending to open up new defensive operations along a hastily formed line.

Transactions Drop On Stock Exchange

Transactions were at a reduced rate Wednesday on the Stock Exchange, the total being 900,000 shares, vs. 1,700,000 Tuesday and 1,800,000 Monday when stocks took their biggest drop in some time. At the close Wednesday most issues were above their low for the day. Industrial stocks showed a loss of 0.63 point, to 140.72; rails were off 0.41 point, to 28.84, in the Dow-Jones averages. Utilities stood unchanged at 22.80.

The London market drifted aimlessly and closed lower as there was absence of New York support. Amsterdam was lower, Paris slightly higher.

Electric output for the week ended January 21 was 8.6 per cent above the like week in 1938 and showed the sharpest rise over last year since the all-time record was made in the pre-Christmas week.

Progress is being made in the legislative program to aid the railroads as major differences between rail management and large institutional holders of rail bonds from out their differences regarding the proposed amendment to the bankruptcy law to facilitate rail reorganizations. A compromise requires approval of 75 per cent of holders in a voluntary reorganization, exempts equipment trust certificates and requires direct court control and payment of interest during hearings.

Testifying on the Lea omnibus transportation bill Commissioner Spawm of the ICC said that it would cost about two billions of dollars to bring rail equipment up to the 1926 standard.

Southern Pacific has placed an order with Colorado Fuel & Iron, Columbia Steel and Bethlehem Steel for 40,000 gross tons of rails, to cost $1,750,000.

With total purchase of 600 planes possible, tentative negotiations are going on for the purchase by France of hundreds of American war planes. It is said that interest is being shown in two-engine bombers similar to those of Douglas and Lockheed.

American Steel Foundries is said to have lost about $1,800,000 last year, company's worst showing, comparing with income of $3,537,761. With a 25 per cent drop in sales, J. G. Brill lost around $150,000; had income of $441,593 in the preceding year.

Companies reporting net income for the year 1938 included Great Northern Ore. $784,924; G. R. Kinney, $151,503 and Panhandle Eastern, $3,059,224.

Nash-Kelvinator reported net loss of $1,579,702 for the quarter ended December 31, 1938. Present schedules, it is stated, are on a basis which indicates profitable operations for the first quarter of this year.

Rev. Vernon Nagel To Go to Selkirk

A news dispatch from the Albany area announces the extension of a call to the Rev. Vernon Nagel of Walkkill to the pastorate of the historic Bethlehem Reformed Church at Selkirk.

The Rev. Donald Boyce, acting minister of the Selkirk church, sent the call to the Rev. Mr. Nagel to fill the pastorate resigned by the Rev. Royal A. Stanton in November, 1938. The acceptance of the Rev. Mr. Nagel will designate him as the 17th minister of the Bethlehem Church since its establishment in 1763.

The Rev. Vernon Nagel, one of the younger pastors of this area, is well-known to residents of this vicinity, being particularly popular with the young folks through his activities in the Ulster County Christian Endeavor Union.

River Tied Up By Cold Spell

Owing to heavy ice the Hudson river is practically impassable to all non-propelled vessels above Poughkeepsie, according to the report issued Wednesday evening by the United States Coast Guard. The report stated that between Newburgh and Poughkeepsie there was heavy ice and navigation difficult to all except full-powered vessels. North of Poughkeepsie, the Coast Guard Cutter Comanche was having great difficulty freeing towed stuck in the ice at Krum Elbow. The river, the report stated, is practically impassable above Poughkeepsie.

New York, Jan. 26 (AP)—

Stocks broke to the lowest levels since last September in today's market before meeting moderate support.

The list displayed slight rallying tendencies here and there after the opening, but a selling wave in the second hour knocked leaders down 1 to around 5 points. The tickler tops, for a brief interval, fell behind floor dealings. Losses were reduced in many instances near the final hour. Transfers were at the rate of approximately 1,600,000 shares.

Aircraft were given spasmodic buying aid on the maintenance of hopes for large overseas orders for war planes and a well managed to post modest plus signs occasionally.

Bonds pointed downward and commodities were mixed. Rubber futures fell sharply. Foreign securities markets gave ground early, but most regained some of their equilibrium when Barcelona fell over to the Franco forces without the serious opposition expected.

Prominent stock losers on the home front included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, du Pont, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Consolidated Edison, U. S. Rubber and Anaconda.

Under pressure in the curb were Aluminum of America, Electric Bond & Share, Bell Aircraft, Lockheed and Niles-Bement-Pond.

Big Leaguers Like Outdoors—Brown Looks Like Champ

Forty per cent of the major leaguers work at other jobs during the winter, but most of the ball stars give their time to fishing and fishing. They claim to sports strengthen their arms and legs. "Ben Brown will be the next middleweight of the world," says Sam Sobel, manager of the Atlanta warrior. He added, "I wouldn't be surprised if he knocked out Sonny Krieger." Brown is only 21. He and Krieger are matched for a February bout in Miami. Mike Krieger, admiring his flower garb, said, "Look at that rose ring out there just like a cable." Rex Weyant, brother of Ed, who inherited a third of Krieger's fortune, is known as the best dressed traveling secretary in the American League. Ed Troy is No. 1. This Bostoner wouldn't think of going without four trunks. He likes like Arturo Gudy, the clean, as opposition for Tony Lento. He can use his elbows, and head just as efficiently. "Two Ton," says the experts. Old Pete Alexander wrote the book on a coaching job on Friday. He is 13th. Bartenders in his San Antonio restaurant yell "This is on the house" every time Joe Maglie hits one into the stands. Sonja Henie's share of last night's gate receipts in the Garden averaged $11,000 per show. Jockeys who rode a winner Santa Anita the other day gave $25 fee to the patrons of the New York City. Killed in an auto crash. Jess Shults and Andy Murphy lead the high school scoring parade. 71-year-old Ed Barrow, new president of the Yankees has had the most baseball career. Even though Connie Mack and Clark Griffith have been in the game longer. Ed regards Honus Wagner, his find way back in the 80's as the greatest of all players. He switched Babe Ruth from a pitcher to an outfielder after observing his hitting. And, Ed introduced the first girl pitcher, Lizzie Arlington. Cowboy Every bettered his own high single record in the International Mercantile League last night. He rolled 263. His previous mark was 250. Commissioner Bill Brown (at the Louis-Lewis one rounder) again denied he has a voting interest in the 20th Century Sporting Club and flashed stubs showing he paid $250 to bring in his friends. Joe Gould, around the ringside, said he has three offers for Tommy Farr in England, but that the Welshman won't leave the U. S. until he has won a fight or two. Bob Erskine, Oklahoma U's new swimming coach can't swim a stroke.

Maybe It Works

Detroit (AP)—Eddie Barbour, freshman football coach at the University of Detroit, tells his men before each game: "Make a touchdown, boys, so I can relax!" but every five minutes, even if his team is 30 points in the lead, Eddie shouts: "Come on boys, make another touchdown so I can relax!" Incidentally, his frosh have won their last 16 games.

Hawaii 'Vow Boys'

Maul, Hawaii (AP)—A group of swimmers has been formed here to restore the island natators to their former high place. Members of the "Three-Year Club" must sign a pledge to practice daily, be in bed by 10 o'clock every night and abstain from smoking and from alcoholic beverages for the next three years.

2,000 Or Bust?

New York (AP)—Ralph Kennedy played over 154 golf courses last summer, most of them in Canada, to bring his total to 1,352. He hopes to celebrate his 55th birthday in 1940 by playing at St. Andrew's, Scotland, as his 2,000th course.

Joe Louis Stops John Henry In 2:29 of the First Round

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Jan. 26 (AP)—The quest for a worthwhile opponent for Joe Louis begins to seem downright silly after last night's farce at the garden, when the Tan Terror reduced poor John Henry Lewis to a battered helpless hulk of a man in two minutes and 29 seconds of fighting.

The Brown Bomber, defending his title for the fifth time, was not struck a real blow as he shuffled in and knocked the daylights out of Lewis. Not a glove had yet been laid on Joe when Referee Arthur Donovan lifted the glassy-eyed John Henry to his legs and yelled to the knockdown judge "that's enough."

Lewis, who spotted the great champion 20 pounds, received as terrible a beating in the fraction of a round as Louis dealt out to Max Schmeling when he slaughtered the German in 2:04 last summer.

The first right that hit John Henry's jaw spun him against the ropes and staggered him. He said later he never recovered from it. Within another 10 seconds the barrage sent him down. He was up, but Louis closed in and continued his merciless execution. Here was a man, a former great light-heavyweight champion and a fine ring craftsman, totally un-equipped to defend himself from the Louis fury, much less try to strike back. It was a lopsided fight.

Though he has reason to be pleased with the $102,000 he took in last night, Promoter Mike Jacobs' mind must be filled with some serious doubts today about digging up that May opponent he has promised the champion.

The Louis of last night surely would have made a chopping block of Rotund Tony.

The only possibility is Lou Nova, providing the promising young Californian continues to develop at at even pace and remains out of Joe's reach for at least another two years.

Tomorrow night boxing moves into the municipal auditorium as Kingston holds its first Golden Gloves eliminations.

There are fifteen bouts on the program, every one of which promises plenty of action. Boxers in both the novice and open classes are slated to fight.

One of the largest crowds ever to pack the auditorium is looked for at tomorrow's bouts as newcomers to the fistic ranks make their debut in the local ring.

The list of battlers, which has appeared in The Freeman, bears the names of seasoned sluggers, too, like Monk Armstrong, Charlie Riggins, Ruby Smith, Sherry Smith, Joe Bliss, Tony Garteix and others.

Among the new crop is Teddy Leskie, downtown baseball player, who was with the Closs A. C. during the summer.

Leskie is under the direction of Kid Chappie, local Golden Gloves trainer, who has Frankie Albright, Monk Armstrong, Hank Buncie, George Goff and a number of others working out nightly at the gym in the rear of Johnny Manfro's barber shop.

Spectators who have seen the local boys in action predict that there will be plenty to cheer about Friday night when they start their quest of fistic laurels and the chance to make a trip to San Francisco, Calif., to seek national titles.

Barmanns Win Over du Ponts

In one of two basketball games put on at Newburgh Free Academy gym for the President's Infantile Paralysis Fund, the Barmanns of Kingston defeated the DuPonts, 40-30 in a whirlwind finish. The Layman-Berkwits five outpointed the Montgomery club 48-41 in the other contest.

Things looked bad for the Barmanns as the end drew near, but Zeek and Rhymer put on a scoring spree that brought the Brewers to within one of tying the tally, 29-23. Then Dykes, who had only three points, dropped in four out of five from long range and Gilday sank a push-up for good measure to save the day for the Barmanns.

Dykes, Zeek and Rhymer were high for the Kingston team and Laubenheimer for the duPonts. The box score:

Lou Gehrig Takes $4,000 Cut, And Undermines the Holdouts

By JUDSON BAILEY

New York, Jan. 26 (AP)—There should be widespread rejoicing among the major league magnates today because the calm acceptance of a cut by Lou Gehrig, baseball's highest salaried player, apparently signals surrender for most of the holdout troops.

Nearly every incoming mail is bringing signed contracts to the various clubs and the really recalcitrant hagglers probably can be numbered on the fingers of one hand. These avowed holdouts include Van Lingle Mungo of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who has been asked to work for $5,000 instead of the $15,000 he received last year and Buck Newsum of the St. Louis Browns, who wants $20,000.

There is no question that their positions were undermined by the signing of Gehrig, who in recent years has stood foremost in the ranks of bachelors ambitious to reach baseball's upper pay strata. Although not announced until yesterday, Gehrig actually signed Tuesday night, which was just one day after he received the contract in the mail. Usually good guesses say Gehrig accepted a $4,000 cut to $35,000.

Whatever the amount, Gehrig's acceptance with nothing worse than a grimace certainly furnished no encouragement to Joe DiMaggio to seek more than offered in his new contract—reportedly $25,000, the same as last year.

The Chicago Cubs have signed nine, including Gabby Hartnett and Pitchers Bill Lee and Dizzy Dean. William Wrigley renewed Dean's 1938 contract calling for $20,000 even though the big right-hander's arm is either going or gone. The New York Giants assured Carl Hubbell he would get his full salary, estimated at $24,000, and have signed a total of 16. The Pittsburgh Pirates nearly doubled the pay of Johnny Rizzo and gave Arky Vaughan a lift.

Police Board Asks
List of Eligibles
For Appointments

The Board of Police Commissioners Wednesday evening instructed Chief of Police J. Allan Wood to ask the Municipal Civil Service Commission to furnish an eligible list of patrolmen from which the board could appoint two patrolmen to fill the vacancies caused by the resignation of Officer Ray Saehlof and the death of Officer Ralph Stewart.

The board had previously been furnished with an eligible list from which an appointment could be made to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Officer Saehlof the first of the year, but no appointment was made. It is expected that the board will fill the vacancies at the February meeting. The four men who head the police eligible list and whose names will be submitted to the police board are: Grover S. Hoffay of 87 Cedar street; George J. Griffin of 48 Hunter street; Frank Sammons of 34 Smith avenue; C. Fred Fatum of 71 Elmendorf street. The eligible list of patrolmen was established last year by the civil service board as the result of physical and mental tests of applicants held by the board last December.

low McIntosh and finish out the season. Of interest was the report on the valuation placed by horticulturists of 12 northeastern states, following a series of conferences in 1938 and 1937. Some of the fine old favorites are found in a list of 21 recommended for discard as no longer profitable for general planting. Among them were the King, Maiden Blush, Winter Banana and others. There are other old favorites for which the speaker said "There is no hope for them; these varieties are on their way out and are almost out." In this list were mentioned, among others, Ben Davis, Esopus Spitzenburg, Fall Pippin, Red Astrachan, Roxbury Russet, Two-Crown. Nineteen older varieties that were thought worth planting in at least some part of this northeastern territory were: Baldwin, Delicious, Duchess, Gravenstein, Grimes, Jonathan, McIntosh, Mammoth, Black Twig, Northern Spy, Northwestern Greening, R. I. Greening, Rome, Stayman, Wealthy, Williams, Winesap, Yellow Newtown, Yellow Transparent, York Imperial. Of all these varieties last mentioned, only four, according to Dr. Van Meter, are holding their own. They are McIntosh and Delicious in the north, Stayman and Rome in the south. Most of the others are rather definitely on their way out. Of 68 newer varieties considered by the horticulturists in the survey but three have met with general approval. They are Cortland, Early McIntosh and Golden Delicious. Cortland seems to have lost ground in the Hudson valley, but has steadily gained in favor in New England. The following new varieties are not so widely favored but were considered promising: Crimson Beauty, Kendall, Linda, Lobo, Lodi, Macoun, Melba, Milton, Tule.
